SKILL BASED SHORT TERM COURSE ON

“INTRODUCTION OF FORTS IN MAHARASHTRA”

Introduction

India has garnered international acclaim for its diverse cultural heritage and its significant contributions towards it. An identifying feature that might seem to be uniform among all historical buildings is their construction technique and structural integrity, which have sustained the test of time regardless of being exposed to natural disasters, man-made catastrophes, and human negligence. This promotes and aids in the rich cultural heritage of our country. Every structure displays a distinct identity and area of expertise due to its categorization into various kinds of architectural types and styles.

A fortification is a military structure or facility used to defend territory during conflict and to establish authority in an area during times of peace. The majority of fortifications are inherently protected by topographical elements, including hills, mountains, forests, deserts, rivers, and the sea. Forts have always functioned as Maharashtra's primary line of defense against enemy invasions. In the native language, they are called 'killa' ('quilla' in Urdu). Forts are defense techniques that date back to ancient times and are described in a variety of ancient publications, including the Vedas, manuscripts, Kautilya's Arthashastra, Rajya Vyavahar Kosh, along with other textual sources. In the 17th century, Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj was successful in capturing, repairing, and strengthening a large number of forts, as well as constructing a complete fleet of forts along the coastline.

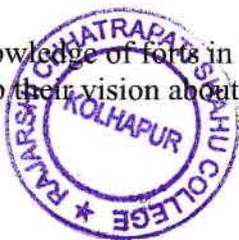

There is a significant variation in the spatial distribution of fortifications in the State of Maharashtra. These variations can be classified into the following categories: land forts (Bhuikot), which are prevalent in central and eastern Maharashtra, hill forts (Giri durg) and forest forts (Vana durg) that are prevalent in the Sahyadri ranges of the Western Ghats, and sea forts (Jala durg) dotted throughout the coastal Konkan. Furthermore, confluence of two or more categories is an exceptional instance, apart from mix categories.

PROGRAMME OUTCOMES (PO):

- PO-1: To introduction the forts in Maharashtra.
- PO-2: To study importance of forts in Medieval Maharashtra.
- PO-3: To acquire knowledge of architectural features of forts.

COURSE OUTCOMES (CO):

- CO-1: Students will get knowledge of forts in Maharashtra.
